

Matthew McLaughlin

March 29, 2014

Section 4

“Imagination”

The river tides in full force

Approach a young and innocent girl far from its source.

The girl makes an effort to stop the surge

By sticking her hands out, causing the river to diverge.

Her hands direct the water every which way

With her feet firmly on the ground, determined to stay.

Nothing can alter the fortitude of her mind,

Except for the intervention of mankind.

Suddenly, bells ring, for dinner is ready,

A pile of leaves replaces the water and leaves the girl unsteady.